The Attorney General is one of twelve statewide elected offices in North Dakota, and was established in the 1889 state constitution. The Office is headed by the Attorney General, an independently elected constitutional officer, and is comprised of several divisions of highly specialized staff and attorneys.

The State's Lawyer

The Attorney General represents the state in all legal matters, civil and criminal, where the state is named as a party or the state may have an interest in the outcome of the litigation. The office also provides legal services and opinions to state legislators, state officials, constitutional officers, state agencies, boards, and commissions.

The Office of Attorney General has approximately 30 attorneys divided into five divisions: State and Local Government, Criminal and Regulatory, Consumer Protection and Antitrust, Natural Resources and Indian Affairs, and Civil Litigation.

The office enforces the Open Meetings and Open Records laws, and issues opinions in response to complaints that a public entity has violated those laws.

Other Duties

In addition to our role as the "state's lawyer," the Office of Attorney General has several divisions with regulatory or investigative functions:

- The Bureau of Criminal Investigation (BCI) assists local governments in criminal and drug enforcement investigations, maintains the criminal history and sex offender registration systems, and provides training for law enforcement officials.
- The Fire Marshal's Office conducts fire safety training and inspections, controls hazardous materials incidents, and investigates fires.
- The Lottery division is responsible for the day-to-day operation of the Lottery and its games. Find information about the Lottery and its games at: www.lottery.nd.gov.
- The Gaming division regulates charitable gaming, and ensures compliance with tribal-state casino gaming compacts. The Licensing section regulates and issues certain wholesale, retail, and distributor licenses.
- The Crime Laboratory analyzes samples from drug and alcohol related criminal cases, and evidence from crime scenes.
- The Finance, Administration, and Information Technology divisions provide support within the agency.

The Attorney General serves on numerous boards and commissions, including the Board of University and School Lands, Industrial Commission (which oversees all state-owned industries), ND Commission on Drug and Alcohol Abuse, ND PERS Board, Judicial Council, and Pardon Advisory Board.
