A Credit Security Freeze Stops Identity Thieves Cold.

You have the right to put a security freeze on your credit file. A security freeze means that your file cannot be shared with potential creditors without your consent. Most businesses will not open credit accounts without first checking a consumer's credit history. If your credit files are frozen, even someone who has stolen your name and Social Security number would probably not be able to get credit in your name.

How Much Does it Cost?

A security freeze is free to identity theft victims who have a police report of identity theft or Affidavit of Identity Theft from the Consumer Protection Division of the Office of Attorney General.

If you are not an identity theft victim, it will cost you $5 for each consumer reporting agency. Different credit issuers use different agencies. If you want to stop your credit file from being viewed, you must file a separate request with each agency. That's a total of $15 to freeze your files.

- Married couples must file separate requests with each agency.

How Do I Place a Security Freeze?

You can place a security freeze with each of the three consumer reporting agencies - Equifax, Experian, and TransUnion - by telephone or mail. You must provide identifying information, including your social security number. If you place the freeze by telephone, you also must fax or mail the documents verifying your identity.

If you are an identity theft victim, provide a copy of your police report or Affidavit of Identity Theft. Otherwise you must send a payment with your information. The address, phone, and specific requirements for each of the three consumer reporting agencies is provided on the next page.

New Credit

If you want to open a new credit account or get a new loan, you can lift the freeze on your credit file. You can lift it for a period of time. Or, you can lift it for a specific creditor. After you send your letter asking for the freeze, each of the consumer reporting agencies will send you a Personal Identification Number (PIN). You also will get instructions on how to lift the freeze, using your PIN. If you make the request by phone it only takes about 15 minutes for a temporary lift to take effect; mailed requests may take up to two business days.

- The fee for lifting the freeze temporarily is $5.00. You must make a separate request and pay a separate fee to each agency.

How long Before it Takes Effect?

Credit agencies must place the freeze no later than three business days after receiving your request and payment. For victims of identity theft, the agencies must place the freeze within 48 hours after receiving the police report or Affidavit of Identity Theft.

What Happens with a Frozen Credit File?

When you have a security freeze on your credit file, a creditor who requests your file from one of the three consumer reporting agencies will only get a message or a code indicating that the file is frozen. The creditor also cannot get your credit score - but the freeze does not lower your score.

Even after your file is frozen, it can still be released to your existing creditors or to collection agencies acting on their behalf. They can use it to review or collect on your account. Other creditors may use your information to make pre-approved credit offers. Government agencies may have access in response to a court or administrative order, or for child support. A prospective landlord or employer also can access your credit file.

- You can always order your own credit report, even if your file is frozen.

How Do I Request a Freeze?

Send a separate letter requesting a security freeze to each consumer reporting agency - use the sample below. Each has different requirements, which are set out below. Make sure to write clearly and sign the letter. Send the letter certified mail and keep a copy for your records. Enclose a copy of any required documents - never the originals. There is no fee for identity theft victims.
